B) Reading

Read the following passage, then choose the correct answer: (8 marks)

Over the past forty years, computers and the internet have become more and more important to us. In fact, depending on computer, technology continues to grow every day. We seem to use computers for almost everything these days, in shopping, driving our car or, communicating with relatives and colleagues.

This explosion in computer technology has resulted in a rush to install computers in every classroom and to wire every school to the internet. In the USA, between 1984, and 1997 alone, the number of computers in secondary schools increased to more than 8 million nits. Both educators and students alike have been forced to keep up with this new wave of technology. Teachers have found that even though they themselves are still trying to learn the most basic of computer skills, they are expected to teach students about computer know-how.

Now, we can see that Egypt has provided the secondary school students with tablets to develop the educational process. Few people would question the role that tablets could play in education. Some educationalists declare that if the students are given the opportunity to use them properly, they will get better grades. Tablets make the classroom a better place to teach concepts and ideas that students need to become brighter and more successful adults. They enable students to keep up with the progress in modern technology around the world.
